

Acknowledgements:

I would first like to thank my Thesis Advisors, Dr. Andrea Cooper of Religious Studies and Dr. Gabrielle Berlinger of American Studies at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, for their encouragement, guidance, and understanding since starting this process almost two years ago. I would also like to thank Dr. Cooper for first introducing me to this topic in-depth and inspiring me with her commitment to academic excellence.

I am grateful also to the Director of the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies, Dr. Ruth von Bernuth, for encouraging me not to graduate early and to write a Senior Thesis instead. The experience that I have obtained from the extra year and this research process has been invaluable.

A very special thank you to my academic hero, Dr. Joy Ladin of Stern College at Yeshiva University, for her feedback as I began my research and for sending me the unpublished first chapter of her book. Her writing has been profoundly helpful not only as a source for research but also for my own personal validation as a Jew outside of the gender binary.

With special mention to Dr. David Lambert, Rabbi Ari Lev Fornari, Rabbi Larry Bach, and my good friend Jayna Fishman, all of whom provided me with guidance through our brief conversations that seriously impacted the direction of my research and formation of my argument.

I would also like to thank Dr. Yaron Shemer, for being an outstanding Hebrew professor and teaching me to problematize everything.

I cannot thank enough the staff of North Carolina Hillel, who have provided me with unwavering academic and emotional support throughout my time at Carolina, and without which I would not have had a safe space to do the self-discovery that brought me to this topic.

And finally, I would like to thank my family: Mom, Dad, Sandi, and Addison, and my dear friends Justin, Asher, Jill, Julia, and Mallory for listening to me obsess about my thesis for the last two years. Your love and support means more to me than I can ever express.

And to those whom I have not had the space to mention: thank you all for your support and encouragement.

-Avivi/Averyl